Gentlemen:

We are enclosing a form of declaration which we would thank you to sign and return to us. This is necessary in order to conform with the recently enacted "Trading-with-the-Enemy" Act which states that banks must obtain from parties remitting funds for customers in foreign countries, a declaration that it is not for the benefit of an enemy, or ally of an enemy, of the United States, directly or indirectly.

In the future, when making remittances for accounts in foreign countries, may we ask you to incorporate in your remittance letter the statement appearing in the enclosed form.

If however, your bank is a dealer as designated under the ruling of the Federal Reserve Board and has received a license, kindly state your license number in your letter when remitting for foreign accounts.

Very truly yours,

E. V. CONNOLLY, Cashier.
